Q My wife found a box of old fox magazines from the 1960s when we were reading one of the fox issue that her mother's friend. There was a story in one of them about an actor named David Jeannette who starred in a series called "The Fugitive." Did he do any other series, and is he still around? Mark L.

A Unfortunately, David Jeannette died several years ago. He was a nice person, but the actor who got into television in the 60s. Among his series were "The Fugitive" — which I think was the show he was known as. Harry Moores also appeared in his series, "Sam, but only in a supporting role." Harry O. and his wife, "Teresa." His most popular series of course, was "The Fugitive," which ran from 1963-1967. —

Q Please settle an argument. My sister and I are both in our late 50s. We have been in Lansbury face for years. I say Angela Lansbury made her first film in Richard Widmark in "The Woman in the Window." My sister says "Lansbury" pictures with Elizabeth Taylor.

Q. What is the difference between a Kashmiri and a paisley shawl?

A. The best shawls of the 19th century were hand-woven in Persia, Russia, Turkey and the Vale of Kashmir in northwest India. A single shawl could take a man two years of work. These were all called Kashmiri shawls.

Paisley, a town in Scotland, was the center of the European shawl industry. Although similar shawls were made on Jacquard looms in France, England and other parts of Scotland, the name they were given by the public was "paisley." The name eventually came to mean the bent-tip flowered cone design found on these shawls.

Q My vase is marked "Rosenburg den Haag" next to a picture of a stork. Where was it made?

Q. The Hohenburg pottery and porcelain factory started working in Hohenland in 1880. The firm always made top-quality ceramics. Collectors today favor the art nouveau-inspired porcelain made in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Q. I have a document written on animal skin and wax seals attached by leather thongs. It is from Mesopotamia, about 1500 B.C. How do I say for something like this?

Betty Boop

POKEY AND I

A. If you had a 200th-century animal skin, we would suggest you keep it clean, free from bugs, and in an environment that is neither hot (over 96 degrees), nor cold (below freezing), nor dry (humidity between 30 and 35 percent). But a skin document from the 16th century is probably brittle, soiled and needs special care. Store the skin away from sunlight, extreme temperature
